

Campfire Ashes

Mingling ashes from old campfires with the flames of a new fire is an old Girl Scout/Girl Guide tradition. When the campfire ashes are cold, they are stirred and each Girl Scout or Girl Guide present may take some to mix with her next campfire. As Scouts & Guides travel, these ashes can circle the globe. Some keep detailed lists of shared ashes, others do not. What is important is carrying the fellowship near and far.

A few ceremonial words are frequently used as the old ashes are added to the new fire, such as:

From the North, the South, the East, and the West, the friendship of past campfires is here with us tonight. The ashes in this container are from many other campfires, campfires of long ago and far away. Mixed here are the memories and the spirit of Girl Scout friendships. May these cold ashes join the living flame of our campfire tonight symbolizing the unbroken chain of Girl Scouts and Girl Guides around the world.

Here is a partial list of campfires whose ashes were mingled with 2006 campfires at Two Sentinels.
